H.K.'S FORCES ON PARADE

COLOURFUL CEREMONY AT CENOTAPH

H.E. THE GOVERNOR TAKES SALUTE.

Impressive March Past By Troops.

Representative of the Navy and Military units and all other bodies took part in the King's Birthday parade and review at Statue Square this morning. A long column, extending nearly two miles long, marched past His Excellency the Governor, Sir William Peel, K.C.M.G., K.B.E., who took the salute at the foot of the Cenotaph. The troops presented a colourful spectacle as they paraded past to continue their ceremonial march through the city. Thousands of Europeans and Chinese lined the streets to secure a glimpse of the troops.

Promptly at 10 o'clock, H.E. the Governor, arrived at Statue Square and was met by H.E. the G.O.C. Major-General O. C. Borrett, C.B., C.M.G., C.B.E., D.S.O., Commodore Frank Elliott, O.B.E., and Squadron-Leader C. R. Keary, R.A.F.

The Royal Salute of 21 guns, interspersed with the feu-de-joint, was fired by the 2nd Bn. East Lancashire Regiment from Murray Parade ground.

H.E. the Governor then inspected the Guards of Honour drawn from the Royal Navy and the Lincolnshire Regiment, with two officers from the East Lancashire Regiment carrying the Colours.

All vantage points around the Cenotaph were occupied long before the time for the ceremony. Many watched from the windows of the Hong Kong Club, while others crowded the balcony of the Supreme Court.

THE MARCH PAST

The Royal Navy led the March past, moving in detachments to the strains of the Band of the South Wales Borderers.

The Navy were followed by the Royal Artillery, and the Royal Engineers, the Band changing its tune for each detachment accordingly. The R.E. detachment included a party of Chinese sappers.

The Lincolns headed the Infantry, the South Wales Borderers and the long column of the East Lancashires bringing up the rear.

MOUNTAIN BATTERY ON PARADE

The Infantry were followed by the Mule Corps with a detachment of mules carrying mountain battery guns. The Air Force followed the Punjab Regiment, and units from the Hong Kong Volunteer Defence Corps, including the Mobile Section, with two armoured cars, motor-cycle section, the Scottish, Anzacs and Portuguese Companies, followed.

The troops continued their march along Connaught Road, Hillier Street, Bonham Street and Queen's Road to the junction of Jackson Road.

Wong Shing, 17-year-old unemployed, was bound over to the sum of $40 to be of good behavior for six months, by Mr. E. W. Hamilton at the Central Magistracy this morning, for the theft of a wrist watch, a cigarette holder and $2.20, from Mr. T. P. Stanton, of No. 1 Tai-koo Terrace, first floor, on Saturday. Inspector Logan prosecuted.

KING CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY WITH SMALL PARTY

To Take Salute At Horse Guards Parade

London, To-day.

His Majesty the King celebrated his 69th birthday with a small family gathering at Buckingham Palace, where many messages of congratulations were received from foreign rulers and all parts of the Empire.

The King's birthday will be celebrated officially to-day with the Trooping of the Colour in Horse Guards' Parade, London, at which His Majesty will take the salute.—Reuter.

MR. ROBERT BAKER

K. C. R. MANAGER HONOURED

LONG CAREER IN COLONY

Mr. Robert Baker, C.B.E., M. Inst. C. E., former Manager and Chief Engineer of the Kowloon-Canton Railway, was appointed as assistant engineer to the Railway in 1906.

In January 1908 he was appointed to District Engineer, and in 1910 was appointed Acting Chief Engineer.

Following his appointment in 1911 as Engineer of Way and Works he was appointed Acting Manager in 1914, and carried out his duties in that capacity until January 1925, when he took over the additional duties of Acting Port Engineer.

In May of the same year his appointment as Port Engineer was confirmed, with additional duties in the Port Development Department and as Engineer of Way and Works.

Mr. Baker was Manager and Chief Engineer of the Kowloon-Canton Railway from July, 1927, when he took over the position in an acting capacity, to be confirmed in August of that year, until April, this year.

Rev. G. T. Waldegrave M. B. E.

CHAPLAIN OF SAILORS' HOME SINCE 1919

The Rev. G. T. Waldegrave M.A., M.B.E., came to the Colony as Chaplain of the Sailor's Home and Missions to Seamen, in September, 1919, and has been in charge of the Seamen's Institute since that date. Mr. Waldegrave has been attached to the Missions to Seamen for many years, having been in charge of branches in Rotterdam, Lowestoft, and in the Port of London. During the War he was Chaplain to the Military forces at Lowestoft in addition to his other duties.

Mr. A. R. Sutherland I.S.M.

LONG CAREER IN LOCAL EDUCATIONAL CIRCLES

Mr. A. R. Sutherland, M. A. I. S. M., was appointed a Junior Master of Queen's College in October, 1906, and has since that date held many educational appointments in the Colony.

In November 1913, he was appointed Headmaster of the Victoria British School, and held that position until he was seconded for Military Service in October 1914.

Returning to civil life in 1920, Mr. Sutherland was appointed Headmaster of the Ellis Kadoorie Indian School, where he remained to Senior Master in June 1928, and Acting Inspector of Schools in the Schools in February 1929.

Three to six years in Sing Sing Prison was the sentence imposed on Art Smith (left) on the conviction of perjury in the Queens County (N.Y.) court. The commander of the Khaki Shirts of America is shown with a deputy sheriff on the way to be sentenced.

TREASURY FINANCING OPERATION

U.S. Home Investors Are Asked For $800,000,000.

TWO SECURITY ISSUES

Washington, To-day.

The United States Government is asking home investors for U. S. $800,000,000 in a Treasury financing operation which may reach a maximum of $1,320,000,000.

Two security issues are being offered.

Firstly, $300,000,000 worth of 12 to 14 years' 3 per cent. bonds.

Secondly, $500,000,000 worth of five-year 2 1/2 per cent. notes.

The Treasury reserves the right to increase the bond issue by a maximum of $520,198,100, which will be enough to exchange the new bonds for the $175,000,000 worth of 1 1/2 per cent. certificates maturing on June 15, and the $435,000,000 worth of 2 1/2 per cent. notes maturing on August 1.

The new bond issue will mature in 1948, but is redeemable at the Treasury's option on or after June 15, 1946.

The notes mature in 1939.—Reuter.

HEAVY RAINFALL OVER WEEK-END.

Nearly Two Inches Recorded.

Nearly two inches of rain fell during the week-end, 0.88 inch being recorded between 10 a.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. yesterday, and 1.01 inch from yesterday morning to 10 a.m. this morning.

The heaviest shower during the week-end was at 4 o'clock this morning, when 0.340 inch was recorded. The total rainfall for the year to date is now 17.285 inches, as compared with a normal average of 24.480 inches.

WEATHER FORECAST

Fair to showery, with moderate south or variable winds, was the weather forecast issued by the Royal Observatory this morning.

SOVIET REPLY TO MANCHUKUO

Bandits Responsible For Amur Incident.

ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SOVIET LAW

Moscow, To-day.

In replying to the Manchukuo protest in regard to the alleged firing by Soviet guards on the Manchurian steamer "Dichen" on the Amur river on May 12, when one sailor was killed and another wounded, the Soviet insists that the casualties were not caused by the guards, who fired in the air, and cite the report in a Manchurian paper, that the steamer was fired on by Manchurian bandits.

The protest also cites the statement of the Japanese Ambassador to Moscow, who, it is said, attributed the presence of the steamer off the Soviet bank of the river to its endeavours to escape from bandits.

The Soviet adds that border patrols were instructed to shoot only in cases of extreme necessity and to call on the Manchurian authorities to take energetic steps to see that Manchurian boats did not violate the Soviet Laws.—Reuter.

MORE RECOGNITION FOR SOVIET?

Little Entente Denies Premature Report.

NEGOTIATIONS WELL ADVANCED

Geneva, To-day.

The report that the Little Entente and Russia will exchange instruments of mutual recognition to-day is denied by a spokesman of the Little Entente, who said that, although negotiations with Russia were well advanced, there were still some points outstanding between Russia and Rumania on the one hand and between Russia and Yugoslavia on the other.

The question will be discussed at the next meeting of the Little Entente in the middle of this month.—Reuter.

WEATHER FORECAST

Fair to showery, with moderate south or variable winds, was the weather forecast issued by the Royal Observatory this morning.

TERRIFIC STORM BREAKS OVER FRANCE

MAYOR KILLED BY LIGHTNING.

FOUR OUNCE HAILSTONES REBOUND 30 FEET

Orchards Devastated.

PARIS, TO-DAY.

IMMENSE DAMAGE OCCURRED IN MANY PARTS OF FRANCE DURING A WEEK-END STORM OF LIGHTNING, HAIL AND TORRENTIAL RAIN.

Two men, one of whom was the Mayor of Lamelouze, near Nîmes, were killed by lightning, and a woman was seriously injured.

The district of Tarbes, was visited by a terrific hailstorm. Hailstones, reports to have weighed as much as four ounces, fell so violently that they penetrated roofs and rebounded to a height of 30 feet from the roads.

Thousands of acres of crops and orchards have been devastated.—Reuter.

EARTHQUAKE IN ICELAND.

Villagers Living In Tents

Reykjavik, To-day.

Considerable damage was done here, yesterday, by an earthquake, though no casualties are reported.

Roads were torn up and telephone poles thrown down. Stoves in some houses burst and set fire to buildings of timber.

Houses in the village of Dalvik were wrecked. The terrified villagers rushed into the open and are now living in tents.—Reuter.

DROUGHT BROKEN IN ROCKIES.

People Cram Churches To Pray For Rain.

LIVESTOCK SHIPMENT EMBARGO

New York, To-day

The drought in America has broken in the Rockies, where light rains have fallen. More is expected.

Meanwhile, the churches in the drought area, yesterday, were crammed with people praying for rain.

The States of Minnesota, North Dakota, and Wisconsin are calling the National Guard to enforce an embargo on shipments of livestock to these States for grazing.

Very heavy rain and hail were reported in Nebraska.

Showers, occurred in Indiana, Missouri and Illinois.

The sweltering heat wave continues in the eastern States.—Reuter.

MORE PROSPECTS FOR RAIN.

Chicago, To-day.

Scattered rains are reported in several areas near here, and more is predicted.—United Press, per S.C. Gold Bar Co.

ANOTHER LOCAL SUICIDE

The body of a married woman, Fan Ng, was found hanging from the roof in her cubicle at 388 Portland Street, Mongkok, at 10.50 p.m. yesterday. The police were called and the body was removed to the Kowloon Mortuary.

Simplicity In Styles

Latest Models Are Plain And Neat.

EXTRA LARGE COLLARS

SIMPLICITY is the keynote of the new spring and summer fashions, as demonstrated at a recent mannequin parade in London. The parade was rehearsed in Manchester and is to go on tour all over Britain. This feeling for simplicity shows itself in the cut of the dresses, the pattern of the material, and in the colours used. Most of the frocks are straight to the point of severity, and excessive shoulder-width and exaggerated sleeves have been ruthlessly cut out.

Plain And Neat

Dresses are plain and neat, with not much trimming to take the eye off workmanship, so that good cut matters more than ever—a distinct blow to the home dressmaker. Lines remain slender on the hips, and fullness, if any, is introduced below it by means of pleats or, occasionally, in afternoon frocks, by a slight flare.

Pleats in frocks are shown singly rather than in groups, and two types are favoured: the inverted pleat at the centre front and the one-sided box-pleat, which gives the idea of a wrap-over skirt. The three-quarter sleeve—not very becoming—is one of the season's new ideas.

Big Collars

Collars, so big that they look like capelets, and slotted through the dress to form a scarf, and another novelty which has its points, since it makes it possible to turn an indoor frock into an outdoor suit.

One such dress was shown in a navy and white printed material with a scarf cape in navy blue. Most of the prints shown were medium sized. Even the large and trailing florals which are always associated with voiles and other summery stuffs have been replaced by smaller and more closely spaced prints of old-fashioned flowers.

Another innovation is the use of fewer colours in prints. Two or three years ago six and more colours were often used in one design. This year two colours appear to be the rule, and as often as not one of them is white.

intermediate countries will be accepted for transmission by these Services. Rates and all particulars are shown in the schedules exhibited at the General Post Office and Kowloon Office. All letters etc., must be marked "By Air Mail" and handed in at the General Post Office. Unless superscribed for despatch by a specific air mail service, correspondence will be forwarded by the first service available.

With effect as from 1st June 1934 the inclusive charges for letters and postcards will be reduced to the rates detailed in the appended schedule.

Mode for Mermaids

For the billowing waves or for the unruffled pool, this smart "necklace" swim suit worn by Irene Dana, way, feature player, is appropriate and desirable. It is held by a buttoned necklace with two straps elegantly crossing the deep sun back.

Paris Vogue In Capes

Oddly-Fashioned Designs Attractive.

IRENE DANA CREATING NEW MODES IN NECKLINE

Paris. IRENE DANA, who has gone back to her own Maison de Couture, after a few seasons with Lucienne Lelong, has chosen capes upon which to center a large portion of her attention.

One, in deep rose satin, worn over a trailing white satin gown, slit down the back and at the corners (the cape, not the gown) and the corners thus created are carried across the front to give the impression of a tunic-length over-skirt.

Irene uses French blue velvet for another example. This one is drawn in at the waistline behind by a sash which passes through slits at the sides and ties in front. So you see this cape business has become ubiquitous, but so varied are the lines that we shall probably not tire of them before the mode passes into another phase.

Trying to make ermine look ordinary is a noble idea even if it does not always succeed. Madame Dana suppresses its elegant trends by using it for the simplest of flat, nondescript collars on black wool suits, and small unostentatious bows here and there on several plain frocks.

She likes draped necklines—and so does every woman whose neck is not a showpiece—and has found new and fascinating ways to get from the front to the back of a blouse or dress via the shoulders. Ruffled ruffles are also on her menu and they trip across the skirt stage just below the knees.

JAPANESE LACQUER

Japanese lacquer trays and cabinets, and papier-mache articles inlaid with mother of pearl, should be cleaned with dry flour and polished with fresh cream.

of the predominating colour.

The linens are equally suitable for the beach, especially when of clear deep colours such as dark blue, dark green, and red-brown. Long trousers and shorts, besides beach dresses, appear in these colours. A beach suit has backless blouse and short tailored coat of plain linen to tone.

For the Town

For town wear there are many silk suits with short buttoned or belted jackets. New materials for these are alpaca and taffetas; and faille satin printed in a small white design on black or navy makes a dress and short coat with white linen revers and cuffs. There is a two-piece composed of a light-weight crepe skirt and short jacket of soft green with white printed design. The upper part in a reverse crepe of white with green design is finished with a wide soft jabot. The same effect may be obtained with printed satins or foulard. Many printed suits are trimmed with white linen or pique collars and white organdy cuffs or ruffles.

HOW TO KEEP THE HANDS CLEAN AND UNSOILED

TO keep the hands soft and white and the nails bright when doing housework, wash them carefully after doing any dirty work and rub in a mixture of 30z. almond oil and the juice of a lemon shaken together. This quantity lasts a long while.

Use for Old Leather Handbag.

THE leather of a discarded handbag is excellent for re-soling small children's shoes. Cut pieces to fit the soles and glue them on with good liquid glue. When these soles wear out they may be renewed.

VARNISHED WALLPAPER

Varnished Wallpaper should be well dusted before being wiped down with a sponge wrung out of cold water with a little ammonia added. A flannel cloth is apt to leave hairs behind. Then polish with a leather wrung out of cold water with a few drops of turpentine.

BRIDGE NOTES

Careful Defence.

by Ely Culbertson.

Many hands have been described in this column showing the working of the coup, both simple and grand, wherein an opposing trump honour is captured by means of the Declarer shortening himself sufficiently in trumps to finally enable himself at the twelfth trick to lead through it.

To-day's hand deals with a very fine Defensive play which enabled the opponents to forestall an impending coup by the Declarer and thereby defeat the contract. The hand was:

South, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

North:—

S.—10 7
H.—J 10
D.—A 6 5 2
C.—K Q 10 4 3

West:—

S.—3
H.—A K 8 6 3
D.—Q J 10 8 4
C.—8 6

East:—

S.—A Q 4 2
H.—5 4 2
D.—K 9 7
C.—7 5 2

South:—

S.—K J 9 8 6 5
H.—Q 9 7
D.—3
C.—A J 9

The bidding: (Figures after bids in table refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs).

South	West	North	East
1S	2H	3C	Pass
2S (1)	Pass	4S (2)	Pass

1—South has opened with close to a minimum hand but in view of North's free bid at the range of three and his very fine fit with North's suit he sees hope of game. Since five clubs seems to him to be pretty difficult South decides to rebid his spades and hopes North can support them.

2—North, although he holds only the Ten and 7 of Spades, correctly decides he must contract for game, and since he does not hold a heart stopper it must be in spades. Opposite a rebid suit the holding of the Ten and one is sufficient to raise, provided the outside strength is there.

West won the first two tricks with the Ace and King of hearts and then quite correctly shifted to diamonds, which Declarer immediately won with the Ace in Dummy. The Ten of spades was now led from Dummy and allowed to hold the trick, and on a second spade lead East went up with the Ace.

It was at this point that East made a very fine defensive play. Most players in East's position would rather hurriedly try to cash the King of diamonds for the setting trick. These players would all then see the contract of four spades fulfilled against them. This particular East player realised that if there were a diamond trick for him he would shortly get it, or if he did not get it, he would have a sure trump trick. Furthermore he realised that if Declarer had held a singleton diamond he might very well be able to shorten himself enough to finally capture the Queen of spades.

East knew that he would be compelled to follow the three leads of clubs and Declarer would eventually be able to lead through him from Dummy at the twelfth trick. Therefore this East player, after a few moments hesitation, immediately led back a club. This play defeated the contract. The defence had gotten the jump, and South, finding himself unable to sufficiently shorten his trump holding to coup East's Queen, was finally compelled to give up the last trick.

Note what would have happened had East returned the diamond King. After winning the trick with a low spade Declarer would have cashed his Queen of hearts. A low club would have been led to Dummy and another diamond ruffed in the South hand. The leads of the Ace and Knave of clubs would have left the lead in Dummy on the twelfth trick and poor East would have been helpless. No matter what card Declarer chose to lead from Dummy he would win the last two tricks with the King and Knave of spades in his own hand.

CITIES' 10 DEADLY SINS REVEALED

Bigness One Of Worst Offences.

HOUSING EXPERT'S VIEWS

Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

Of the 10 deadly sins of cities, Dr. Carol Aronovici, a housing expert, told the Carnegie Institute of Technology, that bigness is one of the most deadly. Dr. Aronovici listed the "deadly sins" as:—

Population megalomania without regard to human needs.

Bigness without greatness.

The mistaking of to-day's statistical facts for to-morrow's human realities.

Confusion between economy and community economics.

Profit without community responsibility.

Efficient function without efficient service.

Respect for private property above respect for human values.

Failure to harmonise the science of production and distribution with the art of living.

Confusion between ornamentation and beauty.

Dr. Aronovici said "the secret of good community planning is not in doing things efficiently but in finding out whether in the long run the thing is worth doing."—Reuter.

1,000TH BIRTHDAY OF FAMOUS MOSQUE

Cairo Prepares For Big Celebration.

HISTORY TO BE WRITTEN

Alexandria. Preparations are being made for the celebration of the 1,000th anniversary of the founding of the famous El Azhar mosque in Cairo. The building of the mosque was started in 970 A.D., and will shortly have existed for 1,000 years according to the Moslem calendar (the Moslem year is only 354 or 355 days).

A meeting of all religious historians, professors and experts has been discussing the project of writing a detailed history of the Mosque. It has been decided that the various phases of its story cannot be written by a single historian, and that the work should therefore be undertaken by several committees, each of them would write one particular section.—Reuter.

CHINA CURRENCY COMMITTEE

Enlargement Planned

(The Currency Committee to be inaugurated by the Ministry of Finance will be enlarged, according to a telegram from Nanking. More members, including Messrs. Tseng Yung-pu, S. K. Shen, Lu Hsieh-pu, John Chen, Dr. Li Chia, Mr. Tao Teh-kuan, and several others, are to be invited to serve on the committee.

ROUGH GROUNDS FOR DIVORCE

Wife Grows Weary Of Husband's Cruelty

KICKED HER ON SHINS

Newark, New Jersey.

A bill of complaint in the divorce suit of Mrs. Marie Blanca against her husband, John,

read:—

"March, 1932—He punched me on the left thigh.

"April, 1932—He punched me on the right thigh.

"September, 1932—He threw a clock at me which hit me on the ankle.

"November, 1932—He punched me on the left arm.

"April, 1933—He threw a lamp at me and tore the curtains from the window.

"July, 1933—He kicked me on the shins and tore down the blinds in the bedroom.

"October, 1933—While I was in bed he poured water on me and pulled the covers off the bed.

In November, 1933, Mrs. Blanca said, she grew "weary" of all this and went to her mother's home. She was awarded £1.4 a week temporary alimony to support herself and her small son.—Reuter.

SELF-CREMATION ACT FOILED

Farmer's Funeral Pyre Of Mattresses.

RESCUED BY NEIGHBOURS

Budapest.

Neighbours rushed to bring help when they saw that the house of Blasius Jozan, a farmer, of the village of Nagykoerces, was on fire.

Eventually they succeeded in breaking down the door.

In the centres of the flames they found the farmer, dressed in his Sunday clothes, lying on top of an elaborate funeral "pyre" of mattresses piled on his bed.

When the horrified neighbours tried to rescue him he shouted furiously: "Go away, can't you! Don't disturb my ascension."

He is now in hospital in a critical condition.—Reuter.

CYCLING CLUB DEFY RAIN

Saturated But Merry Band Of Wheelers.

WINTER PROGRAMME NOW BEING CONSIDERED

Though once again the objective of the Hong Kong Cycling Club was not attained, the run to Fanling in continuous heavy rain was, nevertheless, immensely enjoyed by those hard-riders who defied the elements yesterday.

Under Mr. C. Read (Captain) the Club members left the Ferry at 9.20 a.m., and, despite an increase in the number of minor delays, Fanling was reached before 11 a.m. at which time the down-pour increased in intensity and caused a halt at the Hunters Arms. Refreshments and a chat further delayed the party and it was not until 12.40 p.m. that the journey was resumed, still in the rain. As the latter showed the sign of abatement, the extension to Shataukok was abandoned in favour of a "sprint" for home which resulted in Shamshuipo being reached at 2 p.m. by a saturated, but extremely merry, band of wheelers.

Next Sunday's Programme

Next Sunday it is intended to explore the many tracks in the area between Lye-mun, Sai-kung and Tai-po. This locality offers considerable scope for the wheel of the pottering cyclist, and with Mr. H. A. G. Keates as guide, pleasant spin should result. The rendezvous will be, as usual, the Star Ferry at 8.15 a.m. All cyclists are extended a cordial welcome.

The duties of Hon. Secretary will temporarily be carried out by Mr. H. A. G. Keates at Wellington Barracks during the illness of Mr. H. G. Crayford.

The winter programme of the Club is already the subject of much discussion by the Committee and Members. Advance information gives the information that the events include two tourist time trials over a 50-mile course. This distance is to be covered inside 4 hours on fully equipped machines, and with one compulsory halt for a light meal, which will be provided by the Club.

A hill-climbing competition, a free-wheel competition, and probably in January next, a 25-mile Open road race are also included. Suitable awards are being arranged for the last three events, whilst to all who beat the allotted time in the tourist events a specially designed certificate will be presented.

Burleigh Grimes Now With New York Yankees In U.S. Baseball

New York, May 28.

The New York Yankees, world champions of 1922, today signed the veteran moundman Burleigh Grimes, unconditionally released by the St. Louis Cardinals several weeks ago.

At the same time the McCartythymen sold Pitcher Harry Smythe, 29-year-old Georgian, to the Brooklyn Dodgers. Smythe was acquired by the Yankees during spring training from the Baltimore Orioles where he won 21 and lost 8 in 1933.

The 5-foot-10 inch southpaw has failed to fit in with the Yankees,

MANCHUKUO SEEKS ENTRY TO WORLD GAMES

Berlin Permission Problematical.

POLITICAL BOYCOTT POSITION TO BE FACED

Berlin, May 27. Japanese-supported Manchukuo, her admission into the new Amateur Athletic Association of the Orient assured, will ask permission to take part in the 1936 world Olympics to be held here, it was reported to-day.

Action of the world Olympic committee is problematical in view of the political boycott of the new state, which was carved out of territory once recognized as Chinese by Japanese bayonets.

Manchukuo was barely in existence as a political organism when the 1932 world Olympics were staged at Los Angeles.

Japan, which fought Manchukuo's battle at Manila when the old Far Eastern Athletic Association was broken up a week ago, is expected to press for the admission of her protegee by the world Olympiad.—Associated Press.

FRANCIS OUMET DOES NOT WRITE.

Relinquishes Contract On Walker Cup.

Francis Oumet, the captain of the victorious United States Walker Cup golf team, who had undertaken to write articles on the match and also daily descriptions of the play, relinquished his contract.

"The Royal and Ancient Golf Club had nothing to do with my withdrawal from writing," Oumet said. "The reason I withdrew was that I was much too busy, and had too much to do to captain the American team."

DUTCH GIRL SWIMMER'S NEW MARKS

Considerable Decrease On Helen Madison's 220 Yards Time.

London, May 6. Miss Willy Den Ouden, the 16-years-old Dutch girl, smashed two world's swimming records at Dundee Central Baths on Saturday.

In the 220 yards she broke the record established by Miss Helen Madison (America) of 2min. 34 4-5sec. by 7 1-5sec., her time being 2min. 27 3-5sec.

In the 200 yards Miss Den Ouden's time was 2min. 14 1-5sec., beating the world's record set up by Miss Slasie Stewart (Dundee) of 2min. 32sec.

Miss Den Ouden swam a hundred yards challenge race against Miss Margot Hamilton (Glasgow Western), Scottish backstroke champion, and Miss Madge McCallum (Renfrew), Scottish 100 yards' champion, and was an easy winner in 61 1-5sec.

Miss Den Ouden used the crawl stroke throughout.

GORDON RICHARDS TO RIDE EASTON.

Medieval Knight For "Steve" In Derby.

TRAINER'S RETICENCE

London, Saturday. Following a gallop between the Derby candidates, Easton and Medieval Knight, Gordon Richards has decided to ride Easton in the Derby on Wednesday.

Steve Donoghue is to ride Medieval Knight. Fred Darling, the trainer of both horses, refused to divulge any information regarding the gallop. — Reuter.

Easton is a French horse that has recently changed hands. When running for Mr. Ralph B. Strassburger recently he won the Prix Ladars at Le Tremblay, coming home first in a canter.

WILL PRIESTLEY RETIRE

Player Awaiting Eye Specialist's Report.

CHELSEA FORWARD

"We will come to no decision until we have received an eye specialist's report," was the answer the father of Tom Priestley gave, when asked whether there was any foundation for the report that the Chelsea and Irish international is to give up football.

"We are more concerned about my son's eye than with football at the moment," added Mr. Priestley. "It will be a few days yet before a decision is arrived at one way or another."

Priestley is a school teacher, and will take his scholastic career into consideration when viewing his football future. Should an accident overtake him on the Soccer field at the end of two or three years, he feels he would have difficulty in returning to the scholastic profession.

Cost Chelsea £2,000. In London, it is almost impossible for Priestley to teach and play football—his father's words—and in the effort to make good at both he might fall between two stools.

If the eye specialist's report is reassuring, Priestley will at once come to a decision regarding his future plans.

If the player decides to give up the game, it will be a big blow for Chelsea. Apart from Priestley's worth as a forward, they cannot afford to pay £2,000 for his services for one season only.

INDIAN SOCCER TOUR.

Visit To Africa Regarded Certain.

Calcutta. The visit of the Indian football team to South Africa may now be regarded as a certainty unless further unexpected difficulties arise in the matter of leave for the players selected. The passages have been booked and a provisional list of players, not at present available for publication, has been made. As soon as it is known whether those selected are able to make the trip, the names will be announced.

Of the outside players, Mr. Hossain, a goal-keeper from the Peshawar, Luxinarayana Ramana, and Rahamat, from Bangalore, V. Rao, from Madras, Aquil Ahmad, from Delhi, and T. Shome, from Dacca, are in the provisional list. The Bangalore players have already left Calcutta. It is not certain whether any more trial games will be played.

STANFORD'S ATHLETIC SUPREMACY

Philadelphia, May 26. With a team of only seven men, Stanford University again won the Intercollegiate Amateur Athletic Association championships at Franklin Field here to-day.

Stanford claimed a total of 35 points in the track and field events, Yale finishing second with 25½ points, then the University of California, 20, New York University, 18, and Harvard 16½.—United Press.

LITERARY NOTES

A GREAT ANIMAL SCULPTOR

Tragedy Of Arthur Putnam.

VICTIM OF MADNESS

(By SIR JOHN SQUIRE)

Desert Cactus. By Julie Heyneman. (Geoffrey Bles, 10s. 6d).

Dear, dear, these fashions in titles. At present they all incline to be metaphorical and omit "a" and "the." For some reason both the definite and the indefinite articles seem to be considered Victorian, and hence to be condemned and condemned. Mustapha Kemal is "Grey Wolf," Gaudier-Brzeska (whom I knew, and who was neither savage, nor a Messiah, though he cut his hair queerly) is "Savage Messiah," and now a good American sculptor of the highly respectable family of Putnam is exhibited under the sobriquet of "Desert Cactus."

The appellation might conceivably have been given to such a man as D. H. Lawrence, who was a solitary, and covered with thorns. Arthur Putnam, about whom this book is written, was obviously a sociable person and not in the least thorny. He did, it appears, write the sentence, "If you water a desert cactus it dies." But I cannot see how that applies to his life. Of water, in the sense of encouragement, he had some, but it did him no harm, and could do no artist any harm; of water, in the more literal sense, he seems to have partaken freely in early youth, but not later.

He was sensitive, highly strung, and ultimately mad: like many artists in all media, unable quite to cope with this world, which has never been quite the same since the Fall from Eden:

"It was a shock and an increasing anxiety to his wife when she began to realise that, for the first time since she had known him, he was drinking, as she felt, far more than was good for him. He was never drunk, but he seemed to have recourse to whisky without rhyme or reason.

"It is probable that he felt the need of a stimulant to whip up the energies that had begun to flag, and also that it may have temporarily relieved physical symptoms of which he had begun to feel the disturbing discomfort.

"It was to this unaccustomed indulgence that Grace attributed the shaking of his hands, which, at times, he seemed unable to control."

That passage does show some understanding of the passionate, almost fanatical kind of artist; drink to them, as drugs were to Coleridge, is something which they take to subdue their aching hearts, which long for the lost Eden. "Money had always flowed through his hands, in generosity or carelessness," that again is typical. And the odd thing is that, although the hero of this book dies mad and unfulfilled, one can't help loving him, because one feels that amongst his other excesses there was an excess of love, both of beauty and of people.

American Art Exhibition? He was an American sculptor. He has left behind him a few fountains and a certain number of bronzes of pumas and tigers, all magnificent. He was proud to have sold bronze, done by a designer of the New World, in Rome, the Eternal City.

The illustrations, not numerous enough, are extremely impressive. This young American, who had such a struggle, was such a wit, and died so young, was one of the finest animal sculptors who ever lived. It is not possible for the Royal Academy, which has in recent years given us so many noble Winter Shows, to give us a show of American art? It couldn't compete, having no long past—working under pioneering conditions, with the art of the old countries of Western Europe. But it does exist; and it might as well be remembered that Sargent, Whistler and Abbey came from America, makes one laugh aloud.

YOUNG MAN FROM SCOTLAND

Modern Civilisation Attacked.

FIRST NOVEL OF NOTE

Mr. Michael Murray, in a promising first novel, "The Noblest Prospect," also depicts the unsatisfactoriness of modern civilisation; his attack, however, centres upon England in general and upon a certain section of London life in particular; while his story, told in the first person, is of a Scottish university youth who set forth to encounter, in Dr. Johnson's phrase, "the noblest prospect that a Scotsman ever sees"—namely, the high road to the South. But Kenneth Morrison did not actually find it very noble, for even his first sight of the postman delivering letters in the backstreets near King's Cross Station inclined him to wonder "who would ever wish to write to the inhabitants of these houses." Surely a rather easily puzzled youth!

Later, having spent and gambled away his money, he took on a job as waiter at a night-club and met there a highbrow music critic who showed an interest in him; after which the narrative develops on lines similar to those of Mr. Sharp's play, "The Green Bay Tree."

Mr. Murray's novel is sincerely written and delicately handled, but one does not overwhelmingly believe in its central characters.

MORE SHORT STORY COLLECTIONS

Interesting Glimpses Of Soviet Russia.

INDIFFERENT TRANSLATION

Are we seeing a revival in the popularity of the short story? Here are two more collections of them, and both are of a high standard. Both, incidentally, are also on a much higher level than the snappy bits of that curiously over-rated author, Mr. Ernest Hemingway. "On the Volga," by the author of "Three Pairs of Silk Stockings," is the better.

Here we are given interesting glimpses of life as it is lived to-day in Soviet Russia, illuminated by humour, observation, and understanding; and the author is craftsman enough to be able to show character through action, not merely through talking. The translation is indifferent, and peppered with that dreadful solecism "alright."

Mr. Caldwell, the author of "God's Little Acre," has his own method. In "We Are The Living" he gets his effects by repetition, and this is sometimes effective, sometimes not so successful.

Occasionally he is too allusive, so that one really does not know what he means, and he belongs to the school which credits ordinary persons with deeper feelings and finer sensitiveness than they normally possess; but the facility of the South in the United States is well caught, and the humour occasionally makes one laugh aloud.

DOYEN OF BRITISH PUBLISHERS.

Romance Of House Of Longman.

Although he retired from active business nearly six years ago, the late Mr. Charles Longman was still regarded by British publishers as the doyen of the publishing world.

In the 'nineties he played an important part in the formation of the Publishers' Association, and always attended the Publishers' Circle (a luncheon club) in the days when it used to meet at De Keyser's Hotel. When his contemporaries died off, he stayed away.

His firm was one of those family concerns which are handed down from generation to generation. He was three years old when his firm published the third and fourth volumes of Macaulay's History.

When Mr. Longman entered the business, 140,000 copies had been sold in the United Kingdom alone. The £20,000 cheque paid to Macaulay made a new landmark in literary history.

FRENCH DETECTIVES AT WORK

Truth Of Perplexing Burglaries.

ENGROSSING NEW BOOK

The Compleat Crook in France. By Francis D. Grierson. (Thornton Butterworth, 7s. 6d).

Mr. Grierson's book is the first account of the workings of the French detective system to be published in this country, and it contains a great deal of new and highly interesting information.

Here disclosed for the first time is the truth about a series of mysterious burglaries which perplexed Paris not long ago. They were carried out at longish intervals, but all bore the marks of the same perpetrator. The burglar was, it turned out, a highly respectable German business man living in Frankfurt. Every now and then he took a brief solitary holiday. The holiday was always in Paris.

The case, as Mr. Grierson remarks, is remarkable in criminal annals. So also must be another case, which illustrates the picturesque methods of the French police. Monsieur Z. was found shot in his flat. Madame Z., much distressed, proclaimed that it was the work of a masked burglar. But the police were not so sure. With great care they constructed a waxwork figure of Monsieur Z. and secretly placed it in his own armchair in his flat. Then they confronted Madame Z. with it.

"Madame saw what appeared to be the ghost of her husband, and she screamed. 'Mon Dieu!' she screamed. 'C'est lui!' The shock was too much for her. She broke down and confessed that it was she who had shot her husband, after a violent quarrel."

Without doubt they order some things differently in France.

MADE PRESIDENT BY TELEGRAM

Masaryk's Story Of His Career.

STARTED AS BLACKSMITH

President Masaryk, whose father was a coachman and his mother a cook, reveals himself in this vivid biography, taken down from his own lips in his Slovakian home, as a man of amazing vitality and industry. Rescued by a former teacher from apprenticeship to a blacksmith, he eventually became a Professor of Philosophy, taught himself many languages, entered politics, and worked ardently and indefatigably on behalf of his country. Now, at the age of 84, he looks back on his career.

In the course of his patriotic propaganda during the war he visited England in 1915, staying first at a Hampstead boarding-house. He was in New York in 1918 when, at the age of 68, he received a telegram announcing that he had been elected President of Czechoslovakia. "I simply hadn't thought of it till then," he is recorded as saying.

"It is no small thing to be the first President of a new State, with no governmental and representative tradition. I saw mistakes made: I made some myself. One small detail for example: I forgot that I was a President, and promised my friends that the day after taking the oath to the Constitution I would meet them at the cafe where we used to hold our political discussions in 1914. I went on foot from the Castle into the town; of course, the people flocked in huge crowds. So I learnt to be a President, and I'm still learning to-day."

"Trained" On Novels President Masaryk expresses some very definite and often unconventional views, including a strong belief in the value of fiction for developing the psychological insight that is so necessary to politics.

"For seventy years I have been reading novels every day; it is only now that I sometimes omit a day, so as to rest my eyes. I live in fiction. I should never have held out without it; it contains a vast amount of experience and knowledge of the human soul."

"He believes in the equality of woman with man."

"How, I wonder, can people ask whether woman is man's equal? How should the mother who bore the children not be the equal of the father who begot them? And if a man really loves, how can he love someone beneath him? I see no difference between the intelligence of men and women."

He concludes that the under-estimation of women is a sign of a polygamous society, and that we need education for monogamy.

HISTORY OF THE SUEZ CANAL.

Sir Arnold Wilson's Analysis.

"The Suez Canal: Its Past, Present and Future," by Sir Arnold Wilson, M. P., will shortly come from the Oxford University Press. This is a history of the canal from its inception and an analysis of the vital problems involved in its administration.

The question of dues in particular is gone into at length, and the question raised whether, instead of being a highway, the canal ought not rather to be regarded as an obstacle.

LORD DUNSANY HONOURED.

Literary Award.

The Irish Academy of Letters has conferred the Harmsworth Literary Award, for the best work of imaginative prose by an Irish author published during 1933, on Lord Dunsany for his novel, "The Curse of the Wise Woman." The final adjudication was made by Mr. John Massfield.

Diplomat's M.S.S. Comes To Light.

An unpublished manuscript by the late Ronald Firbank has recently emerged, and it is to be published by Duckworth under the title, "The Artificial Princess." It deals with diplomatic life and was presented by Mr. Firbank to a diplomat. Gay and fantastic inventions such as characterised his work abound in the story.

The China Mail

Hong Kong, Monday, June 4, 1934.

Deadlock Complete.

It has often been maintained, in commenting on the failure of the Disarmament Conference to achieve any real result, that greater success might be won by direct negotiations. The latter method has now been tried to the point of apparent exhaustion, and the Conference was held up to give diplomacy its chance. Yet once again there is no progress to report. Notes have been issued, personal visits exchanged, and opinions expressed. The White Paper recently made public can only set forth a plain record of these things, with no word of actual gain accomplished. It includes also a memorandum from five of the smaller nations of Europe—all of them neutrals during the Great War—which stresses beyond everything else the importance of guarantees for security, and declares that this vital subject could be discussed much more hopefully if Germany would return to the League of Nations. True enough, no doubt. But Germany sees the process in the reverse order, and insists that she cannot return until the disarmament question has first been settled—largely, of course, on her own terms. Even the least cynical may ask what, in that event, would be left for the League to do. While playing for time in this way, the German Government is openly increasing its expenditure on army, navy, and air force, with no regard for its own supposed obligations or the opinions of other Powers. A Government which acts in that manner may issue what explanations it may please, whether early or late, spontaneous or requested, but little significance goes with them. The thing that matters is the rearming itself—a policy now undisguised.

Security remains the chief interest of France. Strongly armed as she is, she has no desire or intention of attacking anyone. That much her spokesmen claim, and that much is true. She would like to see her own, of course, linked up with general security, as M. Barthou declares in his Note to Britain, but her own she must and will demand. Yet, after all, what is security? Does it not inevitably rest, if arms be given up or levelled down, on pledges and promises which may prove fallible? It would not be true to say, as some despairing spirits do, that there is no will to peace among either the peoples or their rulers. There is a will to peace, very general and very strong, but unfortunately it is overshadowed by a still more powerful motive, the motive of fear. This it is, and this alone, which has shut the door on all roads which might have led to disarmament. It looks, after all, as if no resource remains other than the old method of seeking strength through alliances. The "balance of power," discredited so loudly of late, undeniably kept the peace of Europe for many a year, and did not fail to do so till the Central Powers convinced themselves that the balance could be upset in their favour by force of arms. To Conference, as to League, deplorably little heed is paid. A round-table discussion would merely repeat in miniature the many-sided deadlock now existing outside. While that deadlock continues, is it to be wondered at that Japan, remote and secure, is able to proclaim a policy which takes scant account of Western wishes and interests? The nations of Europe, which half destroyed one another in the Great War, are still engaged, at a time of nominal peace, in mutual negation. Even while peace endures, the world is the poorer for such suicidal tactics; while, if war were to ensue, the Western races would be ruined. Is it beyond their capacity to agree with their adversaries quickly?

Scotland Calling.

In the ears of all who have visited her, Scotland, like the East, is always calling. Time was when all Caledonia was supposed to be stern and wild—poetical, no doubt, and romantic, but remote, rather monotonous, and far from comfortable. Improvements in Scotland and better knowledge in England have dispelled these Johnsonian ideas; and thousands of English know that Scotland is nowadays easily accessible, full of variety (one need think only of the valley of the Forth, of the country round Braemar, and of Caithness), and very well fitted with good hotels and with creature comforts in general. And there is plenty of room for the landowner and his guests in the great houses and the shooting boxes, and also for as many tourists and holiday makers as care to take the organized trips or to stay for a week or two of walking, motor-ing, sailing, or golf. And no one seems to get in anyone else's way. For beauty and variety, indeed, Scotland is an ideal holiday ground. But perhaps the notorious diffidence of the Scots may be embarrassed by such hearty praise.

HERE, THERE
EVERYWHERE

Russia And Arabia

One aspect of the war in Arabia that has been generally overlooked is the interest of Russia in the peninsula. Although of comparatively recent origin, it is very keen. In Saudi Arabia, for instance, the Soviet Minister is the doyen of the Diplomatic Corps. Russia was the first country to raise its Consulate at Jeddah to the status of a Legation.

The Soviet sent to the Yemen more than one "scientific expedition" to which political designs have been widely imputed.

Paying For The Plebiscite

The Nazis are now making political capital in the Saar out of the cost of the plebiscite and who is to pay for it.

The question is being considered by a sub-Committee of the League. All that is certain is that the expenses will run to between £100,000 and £200,000.

The Nazis are now telling the Saar inhabitants:

That it is a scandal that Germany should have to pay for the return of "plunder."

That France will pay only in case of a favourable verdict; and

That if the inhabitants vote to remain under the present regime the cost of the plebiscite will fall on their shoulders.

This may be good propaganda, but it is far from accurate.

In most plebiscites the expenses are put up beforehand by both sides. In no case have the local inhabitants been asked to foot the bill.

Whisky At 3d. A Bottle

Japanese whisky is being marketed in British East Africa at 6s. for a case of 12 quart bottles.

The chief distilling centres for this formidable tipple are Salpan and Tinián, two of the Japanese Mandated Islands in the Pacific.

Labelled "genuine old Scotch whisky," 75,000 litres are shipped annually to Japan and there retailed to the coolie class in the big cities at 3d. a bottle.

The principal ingredient is molasses.

It is the ambition of the sugar factories who do the distilling to produce a port-type wine as a side line.

Difficulty has been experienced in getting the right colour.

A HOWLING SUCCESS

I read that a baby got 1,000 dollars for crying for a talkie.

A shoemaker charged recently with bigamy expressed a preference for his second wife. Every cobbler, as Mr. Punch says, should stick to his last.

"What a lot of friends we lose through their borrowing money from us." "Yes, it's touch and go with most of them."

Saleswoman: "Certainly."

Cautious: "Then I'll take them unscented—my wife has a cold in her head."

"I couldn't stand the neighbourhood; it was so unfashionable." "And could you think of no other way to improve it than by moving?"

OTTO NOT THE MAN
FOR AUSTRIA
HABSBURG RESTORATION
POSSIBILITIES

SOCIALISTS NOW SILENT

(By R. H. Bruce Lockhart.)

A new Austria, Fascist in spirit and militarist by necessity, is celebrating the promulgation of a new constitution which gives to the State an official title from which the word Republic has been omitted. The omission is not without significance. It has raised fresh hopes of a Habsburg restoration not only in Vienna but in the modest Belgian manor where the young Archduke Otto is waiting for the throne which he regards as his by divine right.

Ten years, and even five years, ago the probabilities of a Habsburg restoration were less than infinitesimal. Even the Monarchists had little faith in the Archduke Otto's return and, in drinking the health of their boy Emperor, spoke sadly of a distant glorious future which they themselves would never see. To-day things are so far changed that some diplomatic wisecracks in Europe will not lay more than even money against a Habsburg restoration "in our time."

How far is this estimate of the Archduke's chances justified? Personally, I consider it grossly exaggerated, but there can be no doubt that during the last twelve months the odds against his return have shortened. The Monarchists have come out into the open. Last month the church of the Capuchin Monastery in Vienna, where the Habsburgs are buried, was crowded for the anniversary Mass in commemoration of the death of the Emperor Karl. For the first time members of the Government were present, and in Vienna that sentimental sympathy, which sooner or later attaches itself to every fallen royalty, is at the flood.

The reasons for this change are obvious. The voice of the anti-Habsburg Socialists, who have been driven underground, is silent. The middle class is divided into anti-Nazis and pro-Nazis, and the propagandist methods of the German Nazis in Austria have made the anti-Nazi Austrians reject the once popular idea of the Anschluss and think of a Habsburg restoration as the best solution of their country's troubles.

Dollfus Insecure

Dr. Dollfus, say the Monarchists, cannot retain his position indefinitely. We are therefore faced with the alternative of an Anschluss or a restoration. Surely Britain, France and Italy, who are to-day the masters of Europe, must prefer the latter.

For a Habsburg restoration is a European and not an Austrian question. It affects the peace of Europe more gravely than even the rearmament of Germany. It would meet with violent opposition from all the States of the Little Entente and from Germany, for Hitler is even more bitterly anti-Habsburg than he is anti-Semitic. And, whatever the Czechs and Rumanians might do, there is no "bluff" in the determination of the Yugoslavs and Hitler to oppose it by any means in their power.

It is not relished even by Mussolini. His views were trenchantly expressed in an article in the "Popolo Romano" some time ago. There are other complications. There is Hungary, who also claims Otto as her King. Whether one likes or dislikes the Hungarians, no one can deny that the presence of this proud, feudal, non-European race in Europe adds enormously to the complexities of a restoration. There are the Austrian Nazis, and they represent a very high percentage of the youth of Austria. They have little time to think about the past. The present is all too difficult.

The Monarchists of Austria, in fact, are mostly men and women of one party. They are drawn mainly from one class, and I doubt if they represent even 30 per cent. of the population.

Lastly, there is the young Archduke himself. Every restoration stands or falls by its leader. Is the twenty-one-year-old Archduke the man to step into a highly complicated situation and give peace and prosperity to his people? Englishmen who have met him speak very favourably of his intelligence and of his personal charm. He has been brought up very simply. He is studious, serious and deeply religious. There are the assets in his favour. Against them may be set the fact that he has never been allowed to rub shoulders with the world. If, like Prince Louis Ferdinand, he had worked as a mechanic in a factory, I should have valued his chances more highly.

An American View

Instead, he has been surrounded with an etiquette as formal as that which prevailed at the court of Franz Josef. Moreover, he is the all-too-dutiful son of his mother, and the ambitious Empress Zita arouses a certain antipathy and mistrust in the heart of even the most ardent Monarchist. An Austrian aristocrat of ancient lineage was recently received in audience by the Empress at Steenockerzeel. He had come to see his Emperor. The Archduke Otto was present.

He listened in silence while his mother talked. Then he asked dutifully: "Mother, may I go and play tennis now?" Having given the permission, the Empress turned to her visitor: "Have I not brought him up well?" she said.

"Your Majesty," replied the disillusioned Austrian, "he is your Emperor as well as ours."

In a recent article in an American review Mr. Nicholas Roosevelt, the recent American Minister in Budapest, gave a remarkable summary of the dangers of the present situation in Austria. He analysed the various suggested solutions—the Anschluss, the Habsburg restoration, the continuation of the Dollfus dictatorship, and the Mussolini plan for favoured commercial relations between Italy, Hungary and Austria. He discarded them all as impracticable and then closed rather lamely with the words: "Time alone will uncover a workable plan for Austria."

Time can work many changes, but I shall be surprised if it can achieve within reasonable time the miracle of a Habsburg restoration. I do not believe that the correct and pleasant young Archduke can make a serious bid for his throne or that post-war youth will stand for the return of a family whose own lack of prescience was responsible for its downfall.

YOUTHFUL RIDER
IN SHOWTwo-Year Old Enters
Australian Contest.

CHILDREN GIVE DISPLAY

Sydney.

The smallest and the youngest rider in the show ring at St. Ives near Sydney was Billie Gawthorne, who had celebrated only two birthdays.

Alongside him in the same event was Ross Pooley, a three-year-old, who had travelled about 400 miles from Yenda, on the Murrumbidgee irrigation area.

Neither, however, was a winner, first place in the under six years riding class going to Kevin Creagan. The latter, 4 years of age, was a striking figure, with flaxen curls, and blue and white shirt and pants and mounted on a little bay pony. He showed splendid control over his mount Victory.

Joyce Hagenson, a little maid of five years, proved that the girls were in no whit behind the boys where riding horses was concerned, for she was the winner in two classes, under six years and under eight. She was thoroughly at home on her pony, Peter, and afterwards on a larger and less docile animal; she took her place with success along with older riders still.—Reuter.

Maybe it isn't nice to talk about, but "Oby," this little terrier is carrying 475 stowaways to Copenhagen. They're trained fleas which will perform in Europe and couldn't be shipped any other way. The dog's coat has been treated to protect him from bites. Here he is before embarking at New York.

WORKLESS INVADE COUNTY HALL

Demonstration Staged In Bombay.

CITY FATHERS INTERRUPTED

Bombay.
An army of unemployed men of Bombay suddenly invaded the Municipal Corporation Hall when the City Fathers were engrossed in a debate, and shouted "We're starving, give us bread."

The Mayor and the councillors were taken aback by this unexpected intrusion and the Mayor enquired of the leader what he could do.
The demonstrators who had by now taken possession of the hall and the galleries were in no mood to pay heed to any conciliatory words, with the result that confusion and disorder reigned supreme and the sitting of the Council had to be suspended for a time. Meanwhile a squad of uniformed policemen and officers arrived on the scene. The demonstrators were eventually ejected from the premises but not before one of the men in the gallery had thrown an iron pipe on the floor below. Fortunately, it fell clear of the Councillors.—

CHINESE EXPERTS IN HOLLAND

Inspecting Zuidergee Drainage Works

Two Chinese experts, sent to Holland by the Chinese National Reconstruction Commission, have been inspecting the land drainage work by which engineers are turning the famous Zuiderzee into fertile land. This scheme has already turned the Zuiderzee into an inland lake (known as the IJssel) by means of a gigantic dyke which links North Holland to Friesland. General Yang Chieh, who recently visited Holland, also inspected this land reclamation work.

THE MAN WHO DIED

He stood very still and for the moment did not answer. Then he spoke, and his voice seemed quieter, more restrained than when I had known him.

"He died eight years ago."
"I know," I said.
That seemed to nonplus him and again he hesitated.

"Will you come in?"
I followed him into the hall. It was strange going into that hall again. The hatstand was still there, and the pedestal with the aspidochelone, at the foot of the stairs. He led me into the front room which had been the dining room before I died, but which was now the drawing room. I knew it was the drawing room, because all the furniture which had been in that room was now here.

He turned on the light. If I had not had the electric light installed in 1922, he would not have turned on the electric light—or the gas. There would have been a dark. There was a time when I had admired and appreciated his parsimony.

I had taken off my hat and now I faced him, waiting for the shock, waiting to see his face blanch. But still it seemed he did not recognise me, although I suppose it would have been surprising had he done so, because eight years before, he had seen me die, had seen me buried.

"You have a message for me?" he said.
"Yes; from Henry Bell."
"When did you know Henry Bell?"
"I knew him very well—before March 17th, 1925."

"What message did he give you that he could not have given me on March 16th of that year, because you know I was with him at the end?"
"Yes. I know. I saw you."
"You saw me?"
"Yes. You cried. That is, there were tears in your eyes."

He looked at me sharply and the corners of his mouth contracted.
"There were only five present at the end. I have never seen you before."

Then I threw back my head and laughed, a deep, full-throated laughter, and I thought I would not be able to stop.

Now he was angry and came across to me. "What is this message you spoke to me about? I am a busy man and I shall be glad if you will take up as little of my time as possible."

I turned full on him so that I might see his face as I told him who I was.

I spoke quietly. "I am Henry Bell who died on March 17th, 1925," and I watched him, waiting to see the terror spread on his face. For a moment he stood gaping, and then it seemed that it was his turn to laugh, but from the way in which he did so, I knew that he, too, had been labouring under some strain.

I let him laugh until my nerves became jarred to breaking point.

"I am glad you think it funny. I hope you found it equally funny when you inherited my small fortune."

That seemed to start him off again.

"You are hysterical," I said, and I let him cackle on till at last, because all things must have an end, he stopped.

As I looked at him, I could not be-

Heve that this had once been my best friend, for now I loathed him, loathed him almost as much as I had loved him. But now when I looked at him he was not afraid, instead he was amused, seemingly, genuinely amused.

"There was once a man who called himself 'Titchborne' he said, 'and he did what you are trying to do, but he at least tried to make himself look something like the man he pretended to be.'"

ANOTHER ROYAL ROMANCE

Italian Prince Weds
Danish Commoner.

FAMILY RECONCILED

Copenhagen.
Another Prince-Who-Wed-a-Commoner story has just had a happy ending.

Two months ago young Prince Vittorio Massimo, of Italy, married a Danish girl, Miss Grethe Beckshoof, in defiance of his family.

He thought that if once his father could be persuaded to meet the girl of his choice a reconciliation could be effected.

But when he sought to take her to Italy, the Italian representative in Copenhagen is said to have refused her a passport as an Italian subject.

So the Prince went home alone to try to persuade his father to accept the bride. Miss Beckshoof went to a Norwegian ski resort to await the result of his pleading.

Now, it is announced, Prince Massimo has rejoined his wife, having succeeded in his mission.

After staying a few days longer in Norway for the winter sports the young couple are going to Italy for a family reunion.—Reuter.

ZUYDER ZEE IN LONDON

Picturesque Set For Skating Carnival

AIDING CITY HOSPITALS

London.
Holland is coming to London—or, at least, a most picturesque part of it.

Every year a winter ice parade is held on the side with their people—and this scene is to be recreated at the London Ice Club.

Over 100 expert skaters, of whom 80 will be well-known amateurs, are being formed into a Ballet by Captain Oakes-Jones, the official War Office producer of the Aldershot Tattoo.

He has designed a set 90 feet long of an old Dutch canal flowing into the Zuyder Zee.

Dutch barges moored to the quay are to be the scene of a dance in which men and women skaters will dance with real Dutch cheeses in their arms.

An all-Dutch menu has been arranged for dinner and supper. The affair is in aid of two London hospitals.—Reuter.

PAWNING WAR MEDALS

A Bill to prevent pawnbrokers from accepting war medals in pawn has passed its second reading in the Ontario legislature.

THE MAN WHO DIED

That knocked me a little off my balance, for the man who entirely without a conscience. I spoke very slowly: "I think that you had better look at me again."

He did look at me, but still with that look of supercilious amusement. "I am afraid that you make a very poor Henry Bell. You see poor old Henry was a good six inches taller than you."

"Don't you poor old Henry-me," I shouted, and that took a little of the amusement from his face. "I left you all my money when I died, everything I possessed. What have you done with it all? What have you done with my books which I collected during my life, my valuables, seemingly worthless, volumes on the Lycopersicum esculentum, which I treasured but at which you laughed. What have you done with my..."

But he cut me short, alarm on his face.

"I asked you to come in because I thought you had something to tell me. As you have not, I will say good night," and he went to the door to open it.

Then once more he allowed the sneering smile to play on his lips. "When next you try to pretend you are someone else, someone who is dead, see that you get the age roughly correct. Henry Bell was 60 when he died, not 30 or thereabouts."

Now the black rage surged up and around me, taking complete possession of me. "You liar," I screamed, "you asked me in because you thought you might hear of something else belonging to Henry Bell which you might appropriate, something more into which you might sink your vulture's talons." Now I saw the fear in his face as he backed away, but the door was not yet open, and to get out of the room he had to come nearer to me.

I saw the fear turn to terror as I closed with him, and he felt my hands about his throat. He was a man over 60 and I... I felt like a young man, and there was a strength in my body such as I had almost forgotten the use of. At unusual time it did not strike me as unusual, only afterwards—when I let John Martin fall lifeless to the floor, did I marvel at the strength with which it seemed that rage, and rage alone, had endowed me for the passing moment.

I sat in a chair looking down at the bloated features of him whom I had once loved as a brother.

I was only surprised that he had so persistently pretended not to recognize me, for I had not changed. It was all rubbish to say that Henry Bell had been six inches taller than I. It was absurd, because I would then be five feet eight inches and shorter than John Martin, who was five feet eleven.

As I looked at Martin there came into my mind a strange thought. When I had strangled him I had looked up into his eyes and not down. He was taller than I was.

I went out into the hall to where I knew a mirror used to hang. It was still there, only now it was cracked in one corner. I looked in it at myself.

I stood back aghast, for the person who stared back at me was not me. Instead there was a young man about 30, with dark hair, where as mine had been grey, and I said out aloud "My hair was grey before I died" and it sounded funny, and I laughed.

Then I went back into the room where John Martin lay, and I sat down again on the chair and looked at him. Of course he had not recognized me, but I was glad that I had killed him.

Again I asked myself what had happened to me during those eight years from March 17, 1925, onwards? and for the first time the strangeness of the fact that I had died, yet now was alive, seemed to come to me. Where had been those last eight years, and why was I now a young man in the full vigour of life?

So I sat and brooded, and did not hear the shut of a housemaid enter the room, her face still bearing the blacked marks of the kitchen, until she screamed, an awful piercing shriek, and ran from the room. I suppose it must have been a terrifying sight to her, her master lying there with his head across the hearth, his mouth blood-flecked at the corners, his lips drawn back baring his teeth in that last paroxysm of agony, whilst I, a stranger, sat by him.

But her scream had the effect of bringing to me a sense of realities. I jumped to my feet, knowing that in a few moments the police would arrive and that it would be best for me to leave immediately if I was to solve the problem, the problem of myself.

I opened the front door and went out cautiously. I could hear the girl further down the road calling out, inarticulate, but as yet there was no one in sight. I hurried away in the opposite direction.

I did not know where I should go but I felt in my pockets and found some loose change. In a wallet I found several treasury notes of a different design from those I had known in 1925.

I went to an hotel and took a room. They asked me to sign the register, and it was only when I was in my bath that I realised that I had signed "Henry Bell." It did not matter really, I argued, because Henry Bell was dead.

But they found me. They found me within three days. It was on the Tuesday that I killed John Martin, and on the Friday morning as I went into the hotel lounge three men approached me. One, the leader, said in a direct manner, "I want you for the murder of John Martin." Then he warned me.

I shrugged my shoulders and they took me to a waiting car outside the hotel. No one seemed to be interested—no one seemed to know what was going on.

They looked after me fairly well except that they questioned me continually for long periods. They seemed puzzled at my insistence that I was Henry Bell. They in turn insisted that I was somebody else, somebody of the name of Leslie Hibbert, and of whom I had never heard. The newspapers gave little attention to the trial, or the long argument which were waged about my sanity. One referred to my apparent indifference to the proceedings until Sir James Lidburn was called by the defence.

I had had several conversations with him without realizing that he was a doctor, or why he came to speak to me.

But he was a sympathetic man with the eyes of a hypnotist, and I told him a great deal that I did not tell the others, and it seemed to me that he understood. That is, he seemed to understand at the time, but at the trial, although he spoke in my favour, he talked rubbish, and showed that he did not understand.

He told the jury that this was not a case of "dual personality" but one of "transplanted personality." It was, he thought, the first case to be actually recorded, though the thing might have happened many times in the past without being recognised.

He spoke of telepathy and thought transference. He spoke of "force transference." He gave well-known instances of brothers who had communicated with each other over long distances. He said that there was nothing new in that. He said that when the man Henry Bell had been on the point of death, there had welled up in him a tremendous force, a force of hatred against John Martin. That was not a clever deduction on the part of Sir James, for I had told him that myself.

He went on to say that in some inexplicable manner the man Leslie Hibbert (even he insisted on calling me by that name), had had communicated to him and imposed upon him this force, the "personality force" of Henry Bell. And because personality is to a great extent the result of the life one has lived, the thoughts one has had, and the things that one has heard, so, when this force came to Leslie Hibbert, that part of his brain which received it acted like Henry Bell, thought like him, and was Henry Bell.

But, he went on to say, although this personality force was accepted at that moment before the death of Henry Bell, it lay dormant in the sub-conscious brain of Leslie Hibbert, waiting to be brought to the surface by some little memory, such as the house where Henry Bell had lived. For eight years those memories had lain tucked away, until one night a little thing had brought the whole train to the fore, swamping entirely and blotting out Leslie Hibbert whose whole history the police now knew, up to that night of the meeting with John Martin.

That, said Sir James, was what had happened to me. I was not Henry Bell. No one could doubt that I was not Henry Bell, for Henry Bell was dead—physically. But Henry Bell was very much alive at the moment, mentally. How long that force would last he did not know.

Counsel who was defending me was quick to follow up this absurd line of reasoning.

He referred to the verdict of "Murder by Insane." He said that that meant that the brain was the most important part of a man. No one could deny that.

If a man killed under the physical compulsion of another it was not murder. If he killed with his body, and his mind did not intend to kill, then it was not murder. Even if the mind killed suddenly, without previous intention, it was not murder, but manslaughter. No one denied that Leslie Hibbert had killed John Martin—but it was for the jury to determine his state of mind at the moment of killing. I listened to this amusing, if ingenious, quibble, and realised long before the Judge summed up how absurd and ludicrous it all was, because I was Henry Bell and Henry Bell had died in 1925.

They found me guilty and sentenced me to death. The Judge asked me whether I wished to make any statement. I said I did. I said "You have found Leslie Hibbert guilty. You have shown me a woman whom you say is my wife and who says she is my wife. She is not, and never was. I am Henry Bell, and by the law of England Henry Bell should go free. But it does not matter because I am not afraid of death in the least, for I have already died once."

The Judge shrugged his shoulders, very slightly, and then proceeded to read the foolishly dramatic words.

But they cheated me in the end. Doctors came to see me and to speak to me, to listen but not to learn. Then some poor misguided fools presented a petition, and they found that I was insane and put me in the asylum from which I now write to you.

Now the days of my first summer here are lengthening, and I crave the sleep I have once experienced—the Sleep of Death.

ITALIAN VISITORS MOBBED.

Singing Fascist Hymn
Leads To Battle.

FRENCH OBJECTIONS

Paris, May 28.
The visit of 400 youthful Italian Black Shirts, most of them members of the Fascist Balilla organization, to the French village of Laturbie, on the French Riviera, to-day resulted in a pitched battle between the visitors and the villagers, when the former began singing the Fascist hymn, one verse of which rather pointedly referred to Italy's claim to Corsica, Savoy and the city of Nice.

This excited the ire of the villagers, who, aided by Italian refugees, attacked the Fascists. The ensuing battle lasted for fully an hour until a police squad, hastily summoned from Nice to put an end to the hostilities, escorted the Italians back to the border.

SPANISH POLICE CAPTAIN GAOLED.

Harsh Treatment Of Reds In Riots.

Cadiz, May 28.
The Spanish police captain, Senor Rojas, was sentenced to 21 years' imprisonment following to-day's court trial here which showed that, during the January insurrections of the Communists in Casas Viejas, Rojas ordered a torch be set to the building in which fourteen Reds had barricaded themselves. When the men had managed to free themselves from the raging furnace, Rojas gave orders to shoot them.
